Memo and The Notebooks Hit Music City San Francisco on Saturday, November 15

On Saturday, November 15, Music City San Francisco turns up for a night that's loud, unpredictable, and fully alive. Three bands take the stage, each bringing their own sound but the same goal... to leave everything on it.

The night kicks off with Jaded, delivering a set that hits hard and cuts deep, then Memo and The Notebooks take over. A band that bends indie, punk, and hip-hop into something gritty and unpredictable. Their shows are known for sharp turns, heavy emotion, and the kind of energy that fills the whole room. Closing the night is Looking for Adam, whose sound carries a pulse that doesn't let up until the lights come on.

Formed between San Jose and Santa Cruz, Memo and The Notebooks have built a name on live performances that are raw and immersive. No two shows are the same. They move, shift, and pull the crowd right along with them every time.
