FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Memo and The Notebooks Present New Single "A New Hope"

Santa Cruz/San Jose, CA • October 14, 2025

Memo and The Notebooks present "A New Hope," a guitar-driven song inspired by the Star Wars movie A New Hope and told from the point of view of Han Solo. The track leans into 80s-style rhythm and attitude, built around a catchy guitar lick that keeps the song moving from start to finish.

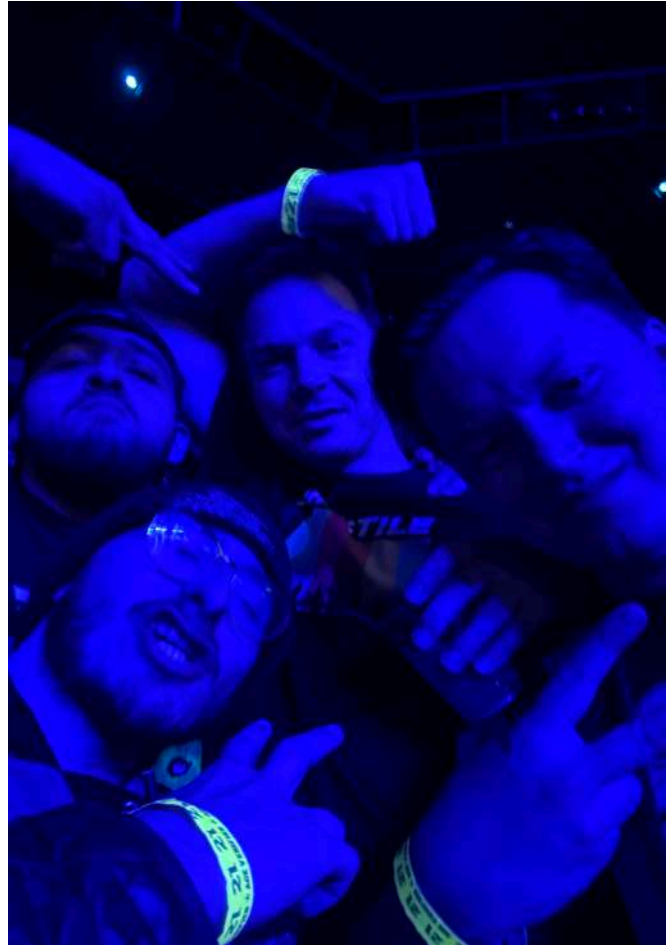

A big fan of the Star Wars movies, Memo has always loved the character of Han Solo

"I know Star Wars like the back of my hand... I've always loved that character (Han Solo) so much, it made the song easy to write."

and the mix of confidence and heart that comes with him. The lyrics nod to the movie in fun, clever ways, mentioning "space buns" and "drinking in Mos Eisley" while still keeping things grounded. Lines like "You tell me I'm bothering you, but you're really bothering me" and "Fly, flying high, higher I think I'd die in hyperdrive" mix humor, frustration, and emotion in a way that feels raw and real.

With its standout guitar work and confident tone, "A New Hope" shows Memo and The Notebooks doing what they do best... making music that tells a story, connects with people, and most importantly, feels alive!

"A New Hope" is available on all streaming platforms.
